Overview

The Data Protection Officer Apprenticeship is a 16-month programme, complete with an end-point assessment, designed to prepare apprentices for roles in data protection and information governance. This comprehensive programme is built around ten modules, each focusing on core responsibilities of data protection professionals. Industry-led workshops complement these modules, providing practical insights and real-world applications.

The curriculum starts with the UK data protection framework and covers topics like cybersecurity, handling data subject rights requests, developing policies, risk assessment, and compliance with legislation such as the Freedom of Information Act 2000. It also includes essential skills in records management, communication, and organisational efficiency.

- ✓ Apply best practices to comply with legal regulations and reduce organisational risk.
- ✓ Assist senior management in developing and implementing information governance strategies.
- ✓ Gain proficiency in handling information requests and managing data efficiently.
- ✓ Oversee compliance frameworks and policies to aid risk reduction.
